Consultant Practitioner Development programme: Stroke and Neurology

Pathway Lead: Liz Cullen

We are now recruiting to a Consultant Practitioner Development Programme that will develop clinical leaders to work, across services and service interfaces, with people who have stroke and neurological conditions.

The pathway prepares participants to become clinical leaders through completion of the specifically designed programme, which is up to three years in length, and based in the Wessex area. Participants will complete a negotiated range of placements across a range of service providers and service interfaces. This exciting opportunity aims to provide the leaders of tomorrow with the skills to influence, lead and implement sustainable positive changes in stroke, neurological rehabilitation and associated services.

Programme time will be divided between the four domains of the Consultant Practitioner role (expert clinical practice; leadership and management; education of self and others; research). Funding is provided for higher education study which is an integral part of the programme. Applicants must already have a Masters’ degree or demonstrate post graduate study at Masters level.

Applicants must show evidence of support for their development from a professional lead within their Trust, in order to ensure their development supports organisational strategic plans. Mentorship during the programme will be provided by a Senior Clinician within the host Trust, with associate mentors within the various clinical placements.
