Dear SHA medical director,

Junior Doctors: Agents for Change
Patient Safety Conference

The Department of Health, BMJ, National Patient Safety Agency and the junior doctor branch of the British Association of Medical Managers are organising a conference on patient safety entitled ‘Junior Doctors: Agents for Change’. This will take place on Monday 7th June at the London Hilton Metropole, Edgware Road from 10am – 4.30pm.

The aim of the conference is to inspire and encourage junior doctors to become more actively involved in improving clinical safety within the NHS and help them better understand their role. We believe that junior doctors are a vital resource to help enable change.

All junior doctors in England are eligible to attend and we enclose an agenda for your information. Following the success of last year’s conference we want to encourage enthusiastic junior doctors to get involved.

We would be grateful if you could nominate five junior doctors from your SHA to attend this conference (and ensure they are supported with expenses where appropriate). The delegate fee is £25.

Please email the five names and their email addresses to ashley.mckimm@dh.gsi.gov.uk by Friday 28th May. We will then contact each junior doctor individually to provide further details.

Thank you in advance of your anticipated support,

Professor Sir Bruce Keogh
NHS Medical Director

Dr Kevin Cleary
NPSA Medical Director

Dr Fiona Godlee
Editor, BMJ
