Course Information

Course Objectives
Interlocking intramedullary nailing is the accepted method of treatment of long bone fractures. The debate starts when used in extended indications for peri-articular fracture stabilization. To facilitate this debate we have designed this symposium to be interactive, with full delegate participation in the discussions, using audience response system.

The format is in form of case presentations setting out the problems with IM nailing in extended indications followed by technical tips to do extreme nailing if so inclined. Each topic would conclude by audience participation, discussion & voting.

The course is aimed at Consultants & Specialist Registrars with interest in nailing techniques. To increase audience participation delegates are encouraged to submit cases in advance for discussion either showing good technique or complication.
