Curriculum

The Community Sexual and Reproductive Health (CSRH) training programme is a relatively new (2010) initiative by the Faculty of Sexual and Reproductive Healthcare and the Royal College of Obstetricians and Gynaecologist (RCOG) in support of consultant led SRH services in the community. This new training programme replaces the SRH subspecialty training of the RCOG leading to the Certificate of Completion of Training (CCT) in O&G.

• The programme is a six year run-through training programme commencing at ST1. The curriculum comprises Basic Training for 3 years in both Obstetrics and Gynaecology (18 months) and Sexual and Reproductive Health. Trainees will follow slightly different competencies from O&G trainees as these are more focused Towards Gynaecology rather than gaining Labour Ward expertise. Gynaecological competencies will need to be maintained throughout training. Intermediate training (Years 4 and 5) will continue the strand of SRH but encompass training in Genito-Urinary Medicine and Public Health. Advanced Training (Year 6) will be a year of completing all outstanding competencies but with opportunities for shadowing and preparing for a role as a consultant. Throughout the programme the trainee will have opportunities for training in leadership and management. Other training attachments will include Sexual Assault and Sexual Problems. The programme is designed to allow trainees to develop the skills to lead and manage the community based Sexual Health services of the future and work within large multidisciplinary teams.

- Further details of curriculum are available at www.frsh.org.uk
